Graves of Confederates Buried in Arlington Decorated by the G. A. R.

THE FLAG CREATED SCENE

When It Was Displayed School Virginia Boy Cheered and Teacher Got Mad.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30 .- The graves of the Confederate dead buried at Ariington National Cemetery were covered with flowers to-day by the same people who decorated the mounds above dust of the defenders of the Union. In addition to the flowers placed on the grave of each Confederate soldier. In the peautiful cemetery, a small United States flag was stuck in the mound that marked every grave. The flowers were furnished

A gentleman from Massachusetts, who now resides in Pennsylvania, said here to-day that he would not have the slightest objection to having his boy cheer a Confederate flag; that it would not make his cheers for the stars and stripes one whit the less hearty. Southern people here are, of course, inclined to cheer the Virginia boy. They also are inclined to do some cheering for little Miss Maria Talbot Galt, of Louisville, who would not sing "Marching Through Georgia," when ordered to do so by the teacher in the course of class exercises. The little miss was expelled from the school, but the case was taken to the chool board, and that teacher was dismissed, and the e miss reinstated. She has just been to one of the Kentucky sponsors who officiate at the coming Confederate

ATTEMPT TO HANG NEGRO

Band of White Men in Indiana Start War on Black Race.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
INDIANAPOLIS. IND. May 20.—A band of young white men, who organized three years ago under the name of "Bungaloos," begun unprovboked attacks on negroes last night and attempted to hang a negro boy on the Capitol grounds. The police were called to the scene and fired several shots into the air before the band would release its victim.

The negro was set upon by the "Bungaloos," overpowered, and a roop placed around his neck. His cries attracted a crowd and a riot call was sent into police headquarters.
